30th. We are still anxiously awaiting the arrival of our transport trains from Tilsit.

(To Marshal Davout.) Herewith is a report of General Bordesoulle, which shows the movement of Doktourof's corps on Ochmiana; try to discover the direction of the Russians.

July 1st. (To the Emperor Alexander.) After having for eighteen months constantly refused to give me an explanation, Your Majesty has at last, through your Minister, placed a summons before me to evacuate Prussia as a preliminary to an understanding. A few days later this Minister asked for his passports, and three times repeated that demand. Prom that moment I was in a state of war with Your Majesty, and by that step Your Majesty was taking from Prussia that very independence which it appeared that Your Majesty wished to guarantee while pointing out to me the Caudine Forks. I pity the wickedness of those who could give Your Majesty such advice. But however it may be, never shall Russia use such language to France; it might possibly be accepted in the mouth of the Empress Catherine and addressed to the last of the Kings of Poland.

War has therefore begun between us. God himself cannot undo what is done; but I shall always be ready to listen to proposals for peace, and when Your Majesty really attempts to cut loose from the influence of men who are the enemies of your family, of your glory, and of that of your Empire, you will always find me of the same mind and of equal friendship.

3d. The whole of the Guard is at Vilna. The Viceroy's corps is here.
